To Whom it May Concern,

Kelly has been working with us for over a year now, presenting our program to real estate agents. This task requires her to speak in front of different size groups of agents. She has represented us well, because she has excellent presentation skills while projecting a very professional image to the room.

Another part of her task is to “influence” agents into trying our program after the sales meeting. We offer incentives, but presenters for us will only get results if they can think quick on their feet and relate well to different people with different situations. Kelly has exhibited these qualities, which has brought her good results (sales) at the meetings she speaks at. Some people can present themselves well in front of a group, and others can relate well and influence people one on one. Kelly can do both.
